HONGKONG, SEPTEMBER 27, 1922.

Our remarks on the Volunteer movement and sketch of its history may now be fully supplemented from the report of the Committee, a copy of which has been forwarded to us.

On the 6th May, 1922, Major-General BRYAN EDWARDS, then in command of the Volunteers, suggested for the consideration of Sir WILLIAM DE VOS, then Governor of Hongkong, the desirability, with a view mainly to the land defence of the City of Victoria, of establishing a Volunteer Rifle Corps in the colony in addition to the Volunteer Artillery Corps, and of raising, if possible, a small troop of Mounted Riflemen, to assist in patrolling the south side of the island. On the 23rd June, at a public meeting held in the Council Chamber, a Committee was appointed, of which Mr. J. F. HOLLIDAY was Chairman. This Committee concluded their deliberations in October and published their report in which they advocated the formation of a Machine Gun Volunteer Corps and of a troop of Volunteer Mounted Rifles, both independent of and unconnected with the existing corps of Artillery Volunteers. They also, after a close canvass, obtained the names of 110 gentlemen willing to join the Machine Gun Corps and 22 who were ready to enlist in the Mounted Troop. The Governor considered and accepted this scheme, and intimated that the Colony would purchase twelve Maxim guns. In July, 1920, the Secretary of State formally approved the formation of the proposed Corps and the purchase of the Maxim guns. The guns were, according to procedure, and have ever since been lying idle and useless. For some reason, possibly the departure of Mr. J. F. HOLLIDAY, the most active and enthusiastic promoter, and of General BRYAN EDWARDS, no further steps were taken with a view to the formation of the two Volunteer Corps until on the 3rd February, 1922, a circular was addressed by the Colonial Secretary to the members of the Committee then present in Hongkong, when Mr. G. F. HOLLIDAY became, on the nomination of the Governor, Chairman in place of his brother. The reconstituted Committee held several meetings and reconsidered the whole question with the result detailed in the general scheme published in another column. Some modifications of that scheme are, we understand, desired by the Government before approval is given and steps taken to launch it.

In that direction it is wished to modify the scheme we have not been informed. Meanwhile it may be useful to subject it to some friendly criticism. There can be little doubt that the first general conclusion came to by the Committee is a sound one: the Volunteers can never as a body acquire the knowledge of the large and more complicated guns in the forts and batteries necessary to render them efficient to serve in those defenses. But they may be reconstituted as to become a valuable adjunct to the regular Garrison for purposes of land defense. Is there, however, any real necessity for disbarring the present Artillery Corps before proceeding with the new scheme? Would it not rather be more advantageous to retain it as the nucleus of one of the batteries? It is proposed to raise two; why not bring the strength of the present Corps up to 100; and make the second battery the Maxim Gun Corps? The present Corps contains a number of active, smart, and energetic men, who have struggled on bravely under difficulties and discouragement, and their services in the past deserve hearty recognition. With regard to the suggested Mounted Troop, we agree in doubting whether it would be of much practical utility, but it is also open to question whether the score of men ready to enlist in such a corps would care to join a foot patrol. If they did not great good they would do harm. There would probably be some little difficulty in raising two hundred men but in keeping the batteries up to strength, and some of the means suggested to that end seem very good and reasonable. The recommendation that the Corps should each year be called out for a period of training is a specially wise one, and works well in Shanghai, where it has been adopted. We are not sure, however, about the proposal to enlist a force of 144 Chinese coolies to fetch and carry for the Volunteers. The raising of a corps of Chinese submarine miners as a subsidiary corps to the Royal Engineers we have always regarded as somewhat dubious experiment. The men are no doubt willing, capable, and give little trouble to their officers; but what security is there that, when they have been taught their duties, and made thoroughly efficient, they will not be tempted away by the Kwangtung Government to serve in the forts on the Chiu River? In the event of a serious difficulty with China—a contingency which the lapse of every twenty years renders more probable—they would be compelled to desert the Corps, just at a time, too, when their services would be most needed. The folly of being dependent upon Chinese for any branch of the system of defense should have been patent to the nearest understanding. Malays would have been equally ill not better adapted for the purpose, and might have been readily enlisted in the Straits Settlements. These objections do not apply with equal force to the idea of a coolie corps to wait upon the Volunteers, but there are other objections to the proposal. Feather-bed warriors are not wanted even as Volunteers, though it is true that they can hardly be expected in this climate to haul the guns about. The question is whether, after all, the employment of mules or ponies would be more prudent, especially as it is not desirable to train up Chinese as gunners, seeing they might one day be employed against us. There is also the question of expense. The maintenance of 144 Chinese coolies is a rather large order. The estimated cost is given at $1,630, and this is certainly the minimum.

Most of the remaining recommendations seem to be feasible and unobjectionable, if we except that referring to the establishment of a regular Saturday half-holiday. To a very large extent this is already observed. But in this practical commercial port, where steamers are perpetually arriving and leaving, everything has to give way to the exigencies of business, and it would be better to leave matters as they are, than to agitate for what in some cases could only be conceded with difficulty and create friction where none exists at present. If the suggested Volunteer Batteries are once raised the non-existence of a fixed and general Saturday half-holiday will not, we think, prove an obstacle to the success of the Corps, as employers will generally be found quite willing to arrange for the absence of some of their employees as may be in the ranks of our defenders. The wisdom of the recommendation that the Artillery and Drill Staff should be in a central situation is so obvious as to need no comment. The idea of a capitulation grant is a good one, as it would form some slight incentive to members of the Corps to render themselves efficient, but the drill should be as light as they can be made consistent with real efficiency. The number of officers suggested is no doubt rather large for a small force, but the reasons governing the recommendation are sufficiently cogent. In time of war there would undoubtedly be a great accession to the ranks and it is that that the officers would exist without the need to be trained, and there would be less difficulty in assimilating the new raw material. The length of the period of service may be a matter of opinion, and probably three years is as good a term as any. It is understood, of course, that any physical reason would, on medical certificate, procure exemption from further service, and the notice of resignation required would not, we presume, be arbitrary as to length, inasmuch as young men are often despatched by the Banks or home to other ports at very short notice on emergencies. In providing for the regulation and control of a Volunteer Corps in this Colony due consideration must be given to the local conditions, which are somewhat exceptional and not at all of the kind with which rules which in military life are necessary and reasonable in England. Too many conditions and restrictions would be certain to kill the movement in its infancy.

Scheme for Reorganization of the Hongkong Volunteers.

REPORT OF THE VOLUNTEER COMMITTEE.
A copy of the above report has been forwarded to us for use, and from it we take the following sketch of the general scheme embodied therein.

The Committee in view of the small amount of the funds of the Hongkong Volunteers, and of the distance from the City of the Artillery, in which their knowledge of big gun drill would have to be acquired, do not think it possible, that the Volunteers as a body could ever acquire such a knowledge of the working of the larger and more complicated guns in use in the Forts and Batteries as to be able to serve in those defenses.

The Committee do not think that at least 200 men can be got together, and kept together, who can be so trained in the working of the larger and more complicated guns in use in the Forts and Batteries as to be able to serve in those defenses.

OLEA PODERICA.

We are not aware that the joint authors of "The Nautika" have anywhere stated the meaning of the word "Nautika." The word is of authoritative explanation in an obvious reading word to be "Nautika," the name of the vessel, the reference being to the vessel which figures so prominently in the story. Nine lakhs of rupees would be $200,000, if the rupees were worth two shillings, as it used to be three decades ago.

The sailors of the United States are up in arms. No less than 25,000 of them have petitioned Congress in favour of having a duty on the clothes which Americans bring home with them from Europe. It is proposed that the value of the clothing imported should be added to the duty on the goods. The duty on the goods is now 10 per cent. The duty on the clothing is now 10 per cent. The duty on the goods is now 10 per cent. The duty on the clothing is now 10 per cent.

It was, if we remember rightly, Thackeray's little daughter who once asked her father why he did not write anything better than "The Nautika." Little Miss Bertha's question was a very good one. It was a question which should have been asked of every writer. It was a question which should have been asked of every writer. It was a question which should have been asked of every writer.

Mr. Radford Kipling is fast becoming a classic. In the "Times" of the 22nd July Mr. Kipling, O.C., quotes from one of his ballads in connection with Mr. Gladstone's majority, and in the "Spectator" of the same date two lines of an original ballad are quoted in illustration of the spirit which permeates and sanctifies the labour movement all over the world. "As long as the labourer has a body to work with," says Mr. Kipling, "he will work."

Professor Huxley points out five features in the progress of electricity which appear to him as quite possible, namely:—

1. That the electric force, as it is called, is not a force, but a condition of matter, and that it is a condition of matter, and that it is a condition of matter.

"Remember, dear," said the venerable father as he sent his youngest and most petted daughter away to boarding-school, "that all my hopes are centred on you. Remember in all your wanderings, your intellectual supremacy, your triumphs, your defects and your temptations, that a good name is rather to be chosen than great riches. I will, I repeat, be chosen than great riches. I will, I repeat, be chosen than great riches. I will, I repeat, be chosen than great riches."
